Inequality for All - By Robert Reich

Robert Reich, former Labor Secretary and friend of Campaign for America's Future, is the star of a new film Inequality for All.

It is an important and very entertaining film. It won the Special Jury Award for Achievement in Filmmaking at Sundance.

In the film, he poses the question: We're in the biggest economic slump since the Great Depression, and we can't seem to get out of it. Why? Because, exactly as in the 1920s, so much of the nation's income and wealth are going to the top, that the vast middle class doesn't have the purchasing power to keep the economy going.

Beginning on September 27, Inequality for All will start showing in over 40 cities nationwide including Seattle, Washington.

You should see this film – and you should get others to see it. It dramatizes the growing income gap in the United States and the implications for the health of the American Economy. It leads to discussion about action to reverse inequality. And it is also a fun movie.

Showing September 27, 2013 at the Harvard Exit Landmark Theater locate at 807 East Roy at Harvard Seattle, WA 98102.
